

Selected Studios
UTS: School of Architecture
2006

▼ Linda Bennett

Urban design concerns and large-scale site development projects are de rigueur in many architectural design studios. Most schools of architecture challenge students to respond to at least the local 'built' context and to explore some aspects of the design-planning interface.

UR-3R challenged students to 'contextually' respond to the entire Sydney CBD and to master plan a prime piece of Sydney foreshore, some 1200 by 200 meters.